

SUSTAINABLE TUCSON PRESENTS A SPEAKER SERIES

Small Changes, Big Wins: Easy Ways to Cut Carbon, Waste and Water Use at Home

Kevin Greene: “Reducing Single-Use Products in Your Daily Life”

Single-use items offer convenience but create significant environmental impacts. This presentation shares simple, practical steps you can take to cut disposables at home and on the go.

Dan Stormont: “Water in the Desert”

Learn about the history of water in the Sonoran Desert, the current threats and opportunities related to water supplies, and how you can reduce your use at home. This presentation will get you started on the path to being “hydro local” (living with our available water here in Tucson without relying on external water sources)

Gordon Nuttall: “Ditch the Gas at Home. It’s Better for your Health and Your Planet”

Electrifying your home is key to mitigating harm to the environment at the same time that it empowers and enables all of us to remove carbon from our energy diet. This presentation will provide you with a guide to electrifying your home and the available resources to help you in doing so.

Donna Corbin: “Waste Not, Want Not. Reducing Food Waste in Your Home”

Few Americans are aware of the detrimental environmental effects of wasting food. This presentation will introduce you to the related environmental, economic and societal issues around this subject and provide you with a strategy for reducing food waste at home.
